

|| Giving Back

Foster Swift has a firm culture and heritage of giving back. Both our attorneys and staff work together to help the communities where we live and work.

Our attorneys volunteer and lead various community organizations, currently serving as officers and active members of dozens of organizations, boards and commissions throughout the state. These range from professional and trade groups such as the local chambers of commerce to purely charitable organizations such as the Boys and Girls Club.

Giving back doesn't stop with our attorneys. Our staff members also play an active role. Examples of their commitment to the community include donating school supplies to local underprivileged schools and organizing a group to craft patriotic quilts for veterans. On numerous Fridays throughout the year, staff members participate in our "Casual for a Cause" program, where staff members are able to wear jeans for a minimum donation to a charitable organization of the firm's choosing. Past organizations have included the American Cancer Society, Doctors Without Borders, Humane Society and March of Dimes.

This past holiday season, our Grand Rapids office hosted an Angel Tree. The tree contained names of underprivileged children; employees chose a name from the tree and purchased a gift suggested on the tag.
